

The no-call list ruling should not be changed. I have enjoyed the peace and quiet and the lack of invasion on my privacy. No one should have the authority to tell me that it violates their rights if they can't call me even when I've made it clear, by signing up on the no-call list, that I do not wish to receive calls. What does that say about MY rights as the person who pays my phone bill? Please don't loosen the rules of who can and can't call me. Silence is golden.
